Voices of God

Lesson for November 14, 1948

"WHAT became of our lost mules?" That is the kind of question which prophets once upon a time were expected to answer (I Samuel 9:1-10). Some people still have this notion about prophets in the Bible, as if they had been gypsy fortune-tellers, tea-leaf readers or astrologers. They were nothing of the sort. It is not possible to open the Bible to the books of the prophets and read history-in-advance, finding out when the next war is coming and when the end of the world is scheduled.

Dr. Foreman

If we could really use the prophets of the Bible in this way, then any reader of these books could write history accurately in advance; but no one has done this yet.

• • •

Hired Man and Aristocrat

THE genuine prophets, whose writings make up so much of the Bible, are something far loftier than mere fortune-tellers. They are authentic voices of God. Because of the way they spoke, the timeless truth of what they said, they are God's spokesmen to our own times as well as to their own, and to all times.

The Bible prophets were not "professionals." They had no churches to support them. No regular meetings were arranged for them. You never would have read in the Jerusalem Journal, if there had been such a newspaper, that the Rev. Dr. Isaish would preach at the temple at 11 a. m. and there would be special music. Few ever knew when or where a prophet might speak.

No one knew beforehand where a prophet might come from. Amos, for example, was a hired man from a sheep-ranch. Micah was a small-town preacher. Isaiah was a highly cultured citizen of the capital, intimate with all the important people. Ezekiel was a trained priest, loving ritual and pageantry. Jeremiah was a lonely, hunted man, living often in jails. Daniel was a member of a king's council, wealthy and famous.

They were all kinds of men, these prophets, but one and all, they were God's voices, pleading, warning, teaching all who would hear.

• • •

Their Times and Ours

HUMAN nature is always much the same. One man alone, or one man with another man, or a man with a woman, or a man in a crowd—in the Eighth century before Christ when Amos preached, or now in the 20th century after Christ, the same sort of situation brings out the same temptations, the same sins. The prophets often sound quite modern, but that is only because the human race is so old-fashioned.

The prophets looked about them and saw a world much like our own. They saw people spending more than they could afford; they saw wealthy women dressing in competition with one another while poorer women starved; they saw crowds of business men attending religious services on Sabbath mornings and spending the rest of the Sabbath figuring out how to cheat their customers on Monday.

The prophets lived in evil times and they brought the judgment of God to such times—then, now and always.

• • •

Sins of Society

IN AN American town there was a lynching one Saturday night. The next morning there were four sermons in the four little churches of the town; but not one of the preachers had a word to say about that lynching or any lynching or about the causes that produce such crimes.

The prophets never would have missed an opportunity like that. They were not afraid to speak out, even when they had the whole community against them.

• • •

What Does God Require?

IT IS easier to say "Don't" than "Do." It is easier to criticize than to construct. But the prophets did not stop with warnings. They have given us a pattern for living, which Micah summed up in those matchless, inspired words: "What doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Everything that is good, in public life or in private, is included in those 22 words.

Father Searches Borneo Bay for Body of Soldier

WALDOBORO, ME. — A gray-haired dad came home after traveling around the world and told his motherly little wife he thought he'd found the body of their long-lost soldier son—buried in a plane's wreckage beneath a Borneo bay.

Many months and many dollars ago John Foster set out from his Down East cottage to seek his boy, Donald, 21, missing and presumed dead by the army after vanishing aboard a Liberator bomber October 22, 1944.

Ironically, it was a Japanese war prisoner—a member of the race his son was hunting—who led Foster to the wreckage under the sea near Balikpapan, Borneo, which Foster believes hides his boy's remains.

Sure of Location.

"I'm sure that's where my boy lies," said Foster with a trace of thickness in his throat. "Harry Belcher, who used to be a flight lieutenant and now is a civilian government employee at Manila, is working to have the plane raised. When it is I'll know.

"I met several other people whose sons are missing around Borneo. We might organize three or four families to go there to find their sons."

This has been a quest of hazardous headaches for the 55-year-old former Massachusetts businessman who had hoped to find peace in this village when he retired.

"I'm going to find our boy," he said as he set out. He said it with a quiet sureness that silenced several government officials who tried to dissuade him.

In his pocket was only meager information, based on army records concerning the lost plane's scheduled flight and personnel. But with this he flew to Australia and on to Borneo.

Travels Through Mountains.

He journeyed south through jungles and over mountain peaks, meticulously following scores of false threads, painstakingly checking each faulty tale.

He slept in huts and under the stars on a dozen steaming jungle islands, risking the perilous wilds of the South seas.

Then on Borneo came the first real clue from the unnamed Japanese who told of seeing a B-24 plunge into the ocean bay over Macassar straits. The tale jibed with sketchy government records so Foster went to the spot and there with the help of new-found friends he found the splintered wreck.

So Foster came home through India, Egypt, Italy and the British Isles, his heart a little more at ease.

What will he do if the wreckage yields the body of his son? Not sure yet, the father said, but perhaps they'd bring the lost lad home to rest beneath the Waldoboro pines.

Sound of Silo Explosion Fails to Awaken Farmer

ST. CHARLES, ILL.—Maurice Regnole, a farmer, is a sound sleeper.

While he took a hard-earned night's sleep, his silo exploded. The blast blew off the silo roof—sent it soaring 50 feet — and bulged its concrete walls.

The silo collapsed onto the barn. The barn folded onto the feed shed. The feed shed knocked over the windmill. The windmill dropped onto the implement shed.

Blaming silage gas, Regnole told neighbors he had heard a slight noise during the night but he didn't get out of bed to investigate.
